

Q1.

A Life Underwater

David Doubilet is a well known underwater photographer, who has had his work published in many books and magazines. He was born in New York and started taking photos underwater at a very young age.

I grew up in New York City, a very strange place to go diving. When I was ten, my uncle took me to the premiere of the movie The Silent World. Produced by Jacques Cousteau, the famous underwater photographer, the film was shot in the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean. I was absolutely mesmerised. Sometimes it happens to you. You see something - a moment, a part of life - that changes the course of your life. I was very lucky because it happened when I was only ten.

After the film, knees trembling, I went up to Jacques Cousteau, who stood straight, tall and aloof, talking to people in the theatre. I sneaked between a forest of legs, looked up at him, pulled his jacket and said: "Oh, Captain Cousteau, I want to swim underwater and take pictures. I want to be an underwater photographer." He looked down and said: "Why not?"

My family spent summers at our house on the New Jersey shore. The sea there is dark and murky and changes all the time. Rough or calm, it is always green. That's where I began diving. I had a simple yellow face mask and green flippers from a company called Frankie the Frog Man. The flippers looked like lily pads. My snorkel was made of hard rubber that hurt my mouth, but I could put my head under and breathe when I swam. I learned to be a good free diver and how to spear fish, too, because that's what you did underwater in those days.

At 12, I learned to scuba dive using a double air tank that was heavier than I was. I became a certified diver at 13. There was a group called the New York Skin Diving Academy. I had to study the physics of diving. In 1956 the sport was barely 12 years old, so I was a young pioneer.

I liked to be underwater for one simple reason: I could escape the rest of the world. I could escape school or parents or lunch if I didn't like it. I was constantly being sought for something I was either late for, or forgot to do, or did not want to do in the first place. Being at the bottom of the pool was like being at the bottom of the ocean – no one could reach me.

My parents never really encouraged me, but they never discouraged me either. Everyone in my family did different things. My father, a doctor, liked to fish; my mother played golf; one sister skied; my other sister ice-skated. Everything I did, I did on my own, and everything was possible. I learned early on that if you want to do something, you go and do it.

There were few books about underwater photography back then. I didn't know as much as the authors of those books, but I wasn't far behind. Using a rubber bag, I adapted my first camera, a Kodak Brownie Hawkeye, for underwater pictures. The first results were absolutely terrible, but I wasn't discouraged. I was taking pictures of everything: fish, mussels and clams, and people peering down from the surface of a swimming pool. I was shooting bubbles. At 14, I won my first photography contest. At 15, my picture of a diver pulling up an anchor sold to a South American magazine. My school did not offer photography courses like many schools do today. But even if you're a student, you can't say, "I want to make student pictures." You must say, "I want to make real pictures that will tell a story and please me."

Photography depends on light. How does the light look in the morning? What kind of shadow does a glass of juice cast? Einstein called photographers "light monkeys," because they are fooling with, playing with, and constantly moving the light. A photographer must be as aware of light as a perfume-maker is of smells.

Photography comes from the heart.
Strangely enough, it's not something you do, but something you use to explore your interests and to translate them into images.

- 1) How many words can you think of which contain a silent K? See if you can think of 10!
- 2) Add the correct relative pronoun into the sentences below:

- a) I am unhappy being in a place _____ it always rains.
- b) The sun was shining brightly, _____ was unusual for that time of year.
- c) Robin Hood was a man _____ was very generous to the poor.
- d) In the summer, I am going to Spain _____ my family lives.
- e) They were both wearing dresses _____ were covered in a floral pattern.
- f) I don't like the clown _____ nose is red and bright.
- g) I lost the present _____ they gave me.
- h) I helped an old person _____ couldn't cross the road by themselves.

- 3) The following simple sentences can be improved by rewriting them with a relative clause. Below is an example:

We have lots of cousins. They live all over the world.

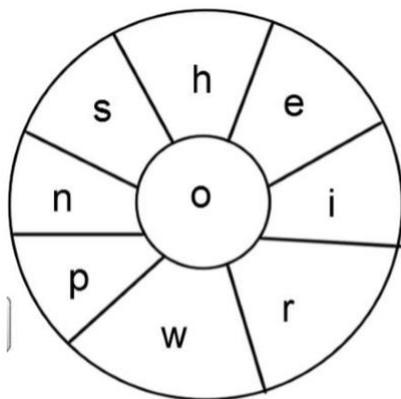

could become:

We have lots of cousins who live all over the world.

Re-write the sentences below with a relative clause.

- a) The man was in the hall. He was playing the piano.
- b) The bear was in its cave. It was hungry.
- c) Many of us enjoy spaghetti. It can be quite messy.
- d) Everyone is talking about this book. It's great!
- e) The rain fell heavily. It had not been forecast.
- f) I fixed the machine quickly. It had broken.
- g) There is a house on the hill. It is haunted.
- h) My brother has a broken arm. It was an accident.

- 4) How many words can you make using the letters below?

Thursday

For the next three weeks, we are going to be looking at some poetry.

<https://www.bbc.co.uk/teach/live-lessons/writing-and-performance-poetry-live-lesson/zrds92p>

This lesson, we are going to be thinking about similes, metaphors and alliteration (something we have all done before). Watch the link above before you start.

The poets and presenters in the video think about the theme of change. They focus on the change of seasons but perhaps you could interpret this theme in your own way?

1) Write three sentences about change which each use a simile.

Simile

The leaves fell from the trees like _____

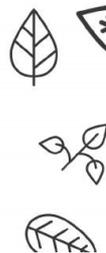

Remember:

A simile is when we use the words like or as to make a comparison between two things.

For example:

The brown leaves were like burnt toast.

Change is as fast as the turning tide.

2) Write three sentences about change which each use a metaphor.

Metaphor

An autumn leaf is _____

Remember:

A metaphor makes a comparison by saying one thing is another thing.

For example:

The sun is an oven.

Autumn is a giant shaking leaves from the trees.

3) Alliteration. This is when 2 or more words beginning with the same letter for example

'The twisted, tangled, trees towered over my head.'

Think about your poem. Write one sentence which contains alliteration.

Now, using the sentences that you have created, try and turn this into a poem. You could alternate between a simile sentence and a metaphor sentence or group them together. How might you incorporate your sentence which contains alliteration?

Friday

Today we are going to look at Haikus. A Haiku is a traditional form of Japanese poetry.

In a Haiku, the first line has 5 syllables, the second has 7 and the third has 5.

Read the examples below:

Kites

High and smooth, it flew. (5)

Into the sky, soaring straight. (7)

Flying kites with you. (5)

HAIKU

Butterflies are cool
in the big, huge, green forest.
They fly up so high!

Haiku Poem

A peaceful evening
Sparrows singing together with pretty feathers.
