Good morning Longboats, how are you today? Remember that new words are being set on REDIWRITER instead of Spellodrome now. You can use the same login and password and it should load more easily on phones and tablets than Spellodrome did. I'm giving 3 points each on Dojo to anyone who has 1000 points or more on REDIWRITER this week!

Spelling

Speaking of this, we are still thinking about wr this week but also going to keep looking at our Year 5/6 words. On the last page of this document, there is a crossword where all the answers are Y5/6 words. Can you complete it?

Main Activity

This week, we are going to think about a new genre of writing: movie trailers.

When you go to the cinema, you will always see trailers for new films that are soon to be released. These trailers are really important because, without them, people might not go and see the film!

This week, we are going to look at writing our own movie trailers. For today, can you watch these trailers. I've given you 6 options, just pick three or four to look at carefully.

I've also put the certificates for each film. The trailers are not scary but some of the films are PG or 12a. Check with a parent they're happy for you to watch these before you start.

(You'll need to scroll down a bit for this one. Find the sub-heading La Luna on the page and then watch the second clip.)

Neverending story - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UeFni9dOv7c>

Harry Potter and the philosopher's stone - <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jGRtKaFGVdo>

Choose three or four of the trailers and give them each a mark out of ten in these categories

Trailer	use of scenes from the movie	use of writing on the screen	use of music	use of lines from the script	use of a narrator over the top

Next, add up the scores from each film to give it an overall total

Trailer	Total score

1. Which trailer scored the highest total? Do you think this one is really the best?

2. Which trailer scored the lowest total? Was this one really your least favourite?

3. Which trailer created the best atmosphere? How did it create a strong atmosphere?

4. Which trailer made you want to watch the film? Why?
